

Re: NASA Instituting Crowd Control on Shuttle

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.shuttle/2005-03/0353.html>

From: Jorge R. Frank (jrfrank_at_ibm-pc.borg)

Date: 03/26/05

Date: Fri, 25 Mar 2005 18:15:00 -0600

"Jeff Findley" <jeff.findley@ugs.nojunk.com> wrote in news:13ff9$42447f51$927a2ce9$17326@FUSE.NET:

> "Reunite Gondwanaland" <reunite.gondwana@gmail.com> wrote in message > news:ico841139ofpi1f6jthhf9vls3bedopn12@4ax.com...

>>

>> "Dusty" is an understatement, by the way.

>

> I was waiting for Mary or Henry to respond to this. ;-)

>

> The "incredible mess", as Mary put it, has to be the biggest reason that > there has only been one landing at White Sands.

Of course, it's not a factor in this scenario. Remember, we are talking about an orbiter that is already known to be compromised. Even assuming it lands intact, that bird will never fly again. So cleaning up the "incredible mess" would become the Smithsonian's problem, not NASA's.

--

JRF

Reply-to address spam-proofed - to reply by E-mail, check "Organization" (I am not assimilated) and think one step ahead of IBM.