

Re: Waiting for controversy...?

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.shuttle/2006-10/msg00029.html>

- From: dg411@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx (Andre Lieven)
 - Date: 30 Sep 2006 17:53:56 GMT
-

George Evans (georgee3@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx) writes:

in article efcrm5\$lal\$1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx, Andre Lieven at dg411@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx wrote on 9/26/06 8:37 PM:

George Evans (georgee3@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx) writhes and spins crap:

in article efagqt\$cyj1\$1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx, Andre Lieven at dg411@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx wrote on 9/25/06 11:20 PM:

George Evans (georgee3@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx) writes:

Oh, I love facts. That's why I love NASA. They televise everything including their blunders, LIVE! With the old USSR you always end up with confusion such as:

Part of the [Buran] launch was televised, but the actual lift-off was not shown. This led to some speculation that the mission may have been fabricated, and that the subsequent landing may not have been from orbit but from a shuttle-carrying aircraft. In the United States, this procedure was used with Space Shuttle Enterprise to test the flight

Re: Waiting for controversy...?

characteristics of the Space Shuttle on approach and landing, so that by the time mission STS-1 drew to a close, the handling characteristics of Space Shuttle
Columbia would be known.
Since then, the launch video has been released to the public(Video: Soviet Shuttle Buran Launch. vunet.ru. Retrieved on 2006-09-13), confirming that the shuttle did indeed lift off, with the poor weather conditions described by the Russian media at the time easily seen.

Yuck!

None of which has Zip to do with why
Buran was cancelled.

But it has a lot to do with the trustworthiness of Soviet stories about Soviet space programs.

Free Clue: The Soviet Union does NOT exist anymore. Reset your clock.

Free Clue: I said "the old USSR."

And, you were still wrong. HTH.

I think

No proof offered ? Claim fails.

my take on it is just as likely to be true.

Re: Waiting for controversy...?

Re: Waiting for controversy...?

Yours has ZERO cites or proof for it. I give an equal ration: Zero.

You flail, but you do not know or learn.

Is this a quote from Marx or Mao?

Thanks for pointing out that you are an idiot dittohead.

Go back to watching Fox shows about the Moon landing...

What the heck! Fox doesn't have any shows about the Moon landings.

Google sci.space history and Fox Moon landing show. It was a very lengthy discussion about all the errors in that Fox Network show.

Thats just more of your ignorance...

Andre

.