

Re: NASA's vision lost on Web generation

Source: <http://sci.tech-archive.net/Archive/sci.space.shuttle/2007-01/msg00013.html>

- From: "hallerb@xxxxxxx" <hallerb@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: 1 Jan 2007 09:01:38 -0800
-

Paul F. Dietz wrote:

I have, prior to this, stated in this group that the problem with America's (and other countries) apathy concerning the space program is the failure of the PAO to publicize said program.

This is part of the fallacy of the true believer, that others don't agree with them because they haven't been properly informed of the revelation that is so obviously true and important to the believer.

What exactly could PAO say that would change the minds of most Americans? Americans who are predisposed to be interested in space already have informed themselves about it, I suspect.

In the end, apathy is a natural consequence of the irrelevance of NASA and its activities.

Paul

Lets face facts NASA oversold the shuttle and knew it wouldt accomplish much but CHOOSE to keep the jobs program going just to retain JOBS!