

Re: were is Kim keller

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.space.shuttle/2008-01/msg00020.html>

- From: "Jeff Findley" <jeff.findley@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Fri, 4 Jan 2008 14:07:43 -0500
-

"Brian Gaff" <briang1@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:xFtj.72460\$c_1.54229@xx

There was also a lot more paranoia around at that time of course. I'm sure more is now being revealed officially than he ever put on his site. Sad, but there are always those with knee jerk reactions and they would lose face if they changed their minds.

Its always good practice to ask before doing anything that affects others in the field of publicity I found.

True. NASA seems to be releasing a lot more information these days than they used to. Space news sites also exist which provides a bit of anonymity to the information they provide. Kim was releasing similar information on public forums using his own name, so he was an easy target for this company's wrath.

Jeff

--

A clever person solves a problem.
A wise person avoids it. -- Einstein

.