

Re: Motic, Bresser

Source: <http://sci.tech--archive.net/Archive/sci.techniques.microscopy/2008-07/msg00013.html>

- From: "IW2GNB" <iw2@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 3 Jul 2008 21:17:12 +0200
-

"Richard J Kinch" <kinch@xxxxxxxxxxx> ha scritto nel messaggio
<news:Xns9AD070295E44someconundrum@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>

IW2GNB writes:

It's different in most other high-tech fields: take cell phones. The worst cheapest chinese thing of today is still a dream machine compared to the first Motorola phones of the '90s.

I disagree. Cellphone connection quality is far worse than any Depression-era bus-station pay telephone. My Underwood typewriter never crashed from a virus. And your phone bill didn't arrive in your mailbox lost amid 10000 spam pieces. Advancing technology degrades quality in some regards.

I see your point but this has more to do with the (mis)USE of technology than with technology per se...